

My experience with Europa Experience.

A PowerPoint presentation by Justin G***

Introduction

- In this presentation I will tell you about our day in Europa Experience and how it felt like.

After Entry

- After our little adventure of going from a train to an overcrowded metro to another overcrowded metro (wich is not a good experience when you've got Asperger) we finally arrived in front of the building. Once we were in we were guided to the roleplay Area where we then were assigned a country and one of four political parties.
- I was assigned to Greece in "Le partie de la liberté" wich seems to be a Liberitarian party that's very focused on the Economy and does not want governments to interfere with it.
- While I do not agree with this world view I still happily took the role.

Start of roleplay

After being assigned a country and a party we were introduced to our roles and the policies we would be debating about and voting on.

Then we were introduced to the other members of our party and we decided who would be working on which policy and who would be the voices of the party.

How it worked

- Once we organized the groups we started to debate about the policy we chose to work on, then we went around multiple sets to get information about it and what people thought of it, then we were reminded of our party's agenda and were called to discuss of the policies, we needed to find arrangements, convince others and finally vote on what the policy would be exactly.
- Of course, after that the party's voices had to explain their view on it before we could vote on whether the policy would be implemented or not.

- A group of people are sitting on a yellow stage, participating in a roleplay activity. The background is a bright yellow wall. The participants are dressed in casual attire, including jackets, t-shirts, and jeans. One person in the foreground is wearing a grey t-shirt and is gesturing with their hand. The overall atmosphere is bright and focused.
- The voting came to a no on both policies so we had to get more information on them and try to find an agreement, but it failed a second time...and a third time.
  - Despite that I think it was a very interesting and memorable day and I enjoyed being part of it.

End of the roleplay

A person's legs and feet are visible in the foreground, standing on a large floor projection of a map of Europe. The map is rendered in shades of green and yellow. A white text box is overlaid on the image, containing the text "After that".

After that

- After we had lunch we were free to visit the rest of the building, learning about the european union and its actions across Europe

...And after that

- At the end of our visit we watched a film about the European union's challenges.
- Then right before we went out we were given a bag containing a book and a pen wich one of us seemed very excited about.
- And finally we made another little advenure of going from an overcrowded metro...to another overcrowded metro...and finally a train.

END

- As I said earlier, this was a very interesting and memorable experience that I enjoyed being part of.

Thanks for listening to the end.
